

Making a lifetime of difference for seriously ill children

Daily Dash

We know many of our incredible supporters are fantastic athletes and love to keep fit. You could complete your very own isolation event and raise funds for Together for Short Lives. You could tackle a garden trek, half marathon or even a family relay to get outside, use up your energy and raise money for the families that rely on your support.

Auction away

From skills to time, there are many things you could auction away to your colleagues. As barbers and hair dressers are closed, you could auction off your first post-isolation hair cut to a lucky someone. Do you think your team would pay to dress you for the day? The options are endless and at auctions, everyone's a winner... aren't they?

Petrol pledge

With travel limited, you are sure to be saving some pennies on your commute to work every day. Sign up to pledge your support for Together for Short Lives with a #PetrolPledge. Only £5 per week could make such a difference to the families that we work with, providing care, support and guidance through the toughest of times.

Birthday Bonanza

Birthdays are a time for celebration and being at home doesn't change that! Why not get your friends and family to donate to Together for Short Lives on your behalf or set up a Facebook birthday fundraiser?

Bank your beer

If you're having a beverage at home with your family but would usually be out sipping on beer or cocktails, consider donating your social savings to Together for Short Lives to help seriously ill children and their families get the support they need.

Dinner delights

Why not host a virtual dinner party with your friends! Cook the same meal together and sit down to catch up, enjoy company and make memories together. You can use Facetime, Zoom, Houseparty or any other virtual meeting place to make this happen - then send your savings to Together for Short Lives.
